FRIENDS Builds Emotional Resilience

Do you know that person who always bounces back from stressful situations or crises and always sees the positive side of things? You know, the one that always just, “rolls with the punches” and comes out on top after dealing with their problems and adverse situations. Well, chances are, that person has emotional resilience. Wouldn’t it be great if every child had the chance to develop their own emotional resilience? We think so! That’s why we support the delivery of the FRIENDS programs in schools, childcare center and summer programs throughout our health region.

For ages 4-6 on Wednesdays July 6, 13, 27 August 3 & 10 from 9am-Noon

The FRIENDS Program was introduced to Rocanville School; and Daycare, Macleod Elementary in Moosomin, Wapella School and Daycare and The SE Early Childhood Committee. Teachers, counselors, daycare workers and a Regional Kids First Program Developer attended one or both days of Leadership training in January. Twenty students from Wapella’s kindergarten to grade two successfully completed the Fun with FRIENDS Program on June 8th. The program was embraced with such enthusiasm other students asked to have “FRIENDS” come to their class. Plans are underway to continue the program in Wapella, introduce it to other schools and daycares and begin a summer program in Rocanville on July 6th.

If you want to know more about the FRIENDS program, please contact Karen Holloway, Rural Health Promotion Coordinator at 306-735-2027, Regina Qu’Appelle Health Region or Roland Holness, Health Educator at 306-766-7316 .

Money smarts

Teens in high school? Help ensure they're financial prepared for post-secondary education.

Driving. Voting. Charting a course into their future. As the end of high school approaches, teens begin an exciting chapter in their lives. They can seriously consider career choices and start researching post-secondary programs.

Taking the time to financially prepare teenagers for post-secondary education could be just as important as – perhaps even more important than – other lessons shared over the years. If you have children heading towards college or university, starting the conversation now can help set the stage for their financial security after they finish school.

What is the price tag?

In 2013/14, one year's tuition at a Canadian university cost an average of $5,772 – an increase of 3.3 per cent over the previous year. Books and other course materials often add a further $800 to $1,000 per year to expenses.<sup>(1)</sup> The Canadian Centre for Policy Alternatives projects that average tuition and compulsory fees for Canadian undergrads will reach $7,437 in 2016/17.<sup>(2)</sup> When housing, transportation and other expenses are factored in, a four-year, full-time program could cost $60,000 – or more.<sup>(3)</sup>

Where will the money come from?

If you've been setting aside money in a Registered Education Savings Plan (RESP), you already have a pool of savings available to help pay for your children's post-secondary education. If you haven't, you may want to catch up with a lump-sum contribution – and you may still be able to take advantage of the Canada Education Savings Grant (CESG). In the years your child turns 16 and 17, you can receive CESGs that top of your contribution as long as the RESP had deposits of at least:

- $2,000 before the end of the year your child turned 15; or

- $100 in each of any four years before the year your child turned 15

To learn more about the CESC, visit www.canlearn.ca/eng/savings/cesg.shtml.

RESPs aren't the only way to finance post-secondary education, of course. Students may be able to access some of the more than $100 million(4) in scholarships, grants and bursaries offered by federal, provincial and territorial governments, schools, companies and charitable foundations. Awarded based on merit or financial need, this money is a gift that doesn't have to be paid back. Start your search here:

- www.canlearn.ca
- www.scholarshipscanada.com
- www.studentawards.com

Your children may also be able to contribute. Part-time and summer jobs during high school can help them save money towards tuition. Jobs on or near campus may offer flexible shifts that accommodate class schedules. Career-related internships, co-op programs and apprenticeships, often coordinated by universities and colleges, can provide excellent work experience as well as a source of income. Find out about a range of employment opportunities for students here:

www.servicecanada.gc.ca/eng/audiences/youth/employment.shtml.

What if we need to borrow?

Many students supplement money available from savings, scholarships, grants, bursaries and employment income with loans. According to a recent study,<sup>(5)</sup> 59 per cent of students borrow money to help finance their education.

Among students with debt, the average amount at graduation is $24,579. On average, government student loans account for approximately 62 per cent of all debt.(5) Find more information about student loans here: www.canlearn.ca/eng/loans\_grants/loans.

How can a budget help?

One of the most important money lessons teenagers can learn is how to create and stick to a budget. A budget may not sound like a lot of fun to young people, but it's a very simple concept: a list of expenses and income. In a balanced budget – what your children should always aim for – there is enough income to pay all of the expenses.

Help your children build a realistic, personalized post-secondary budget and encourage them to track their day-to-day spending using a simple spreadsheet or smartphone app. It may take your teens some getting used to, but it won't take long for them to see the value of budgeting. In fact, tracking spending habits and following a budget can help them find and save money for more "fun" activities once expenses have been paid.

What about emergencies?

Unexpected costs can have a serious impact on a student's budget. Encourage your children to develop a plan in advance so they know what to do (and what not to do) when they can't make ends meet. Do they have a dedicated emergency fund? Will they call you for help? Will they need to borrow – and, if so, what option has the lowest interest rate? Answering these questions before a crisis hits can help students ride out the inevitable financial surprises life presents.

As your teenagers embark on this new stage in their lives, they will face greater independence and greater consequences when they make mistakes. With appropriate support and understanding, you can help them manage budgetary challenges and guide them onto the right financial path for life.
