Investment loans 101

Borrowing to invest could increase both return potential and risk.

Many Canadians already borrow to invest without thinking about it that way. Taking out a mortgage to buy a home is, technically, leveraged investing.

The homeowner borrows part of the money needed to make an investment in real estate that he or she couldn't otherwise afford. As a result, the homeowner is more exposed to fluctuations in the real estate market – benefiting more if the market value of the home rises but also risking more if the market value of the home falls.

Some people choose to use a similar strategy when investing, and borrow some or all of the money they want to invest. Again, this strategy amplifies the benefit if the value of their investments rises, but also amplifies the risk if the value of their investments falls. That said, for the right investor – one who plans to invest for the long term and has a higher tolerance for risk – borrowing to invest can be an effective way to accumulate wealth more quickly. And, when investing outside a registered plan, the loan interest may even be tax-deductible.

How does it work?

Two types of investment loans are 100 per cent loans and multiplier loans. With a 100 per cent loan, the investor borrows the entire amount he or she plans to invest.

Some lenders offer 100 per cent loans ranging from $10,000 to $300,000. With a multiplier loan, the investor already has some money to invest, and the lender multiplies the value of the investor's capital by up to three times, with loan amounts that can range from $10,000 to $1 million.

Regardless of the loan type, the overall strategy is usually the same. The investor borrows a lump sum, invests the money and keeps any investment growth, while paying interest on the loan. The key to a successful investment loan strategy is ensuring that the return on the investment is significantly higher than the interest on the loan – providing some leeway in case interest rates rise – and that the return is relatively stable, experiencing little volatility. That means the choice of investment is critical: it should provide solid performance with low risk.

Investors should be aware that they must be disciplined about paying back the loan because, unlike a mortgage, investment loans often don't require that some principal be repaid with every payment.

What happens when investments rise – or fall?

An investment loan increases the amount of money an investor has available to invest, which amplifies any gains or losses. For

Is it right for you?

Investors who are thinking about borrowing to invest should consider their time horizon, risk tolerance and the amount of debt they already have. They should be able to count on enough income to cover loan payments and taxes due on potential investment growth. They should also evaluate whether they can reliably earn returns that are significantly higher than the interest on the investment loan.

If you're interested in finding out more about investment loans, give us a call we can help you weigh the benefits against the risks and decide if this approach is right for you

The Rocanville Town & Country Golf Club Executive would like to thank everyone for their support in the 2019 season.

We had a successful season which wouldn't be possible without the support of the community's local businesses in countless different ways, all the volunteers who helped at the course, and everyone else who enjoyed the facility.

We would also like to give special Thank You to the golf club staff themselves – the grounds crew for making the course one of the best looking in the area and the clubhouse staff for all their hard work running the clubhouse and cooking all that amazing food.

We look forward to what the 2020 season will bring and hope to see everyone again next year!

Our Seeds of Empathy Program began at the end of October. The Seeds of Empathy Program fosters the development of empathy through early literacy and play activities, (observation, problem solving, numeracy, drama, art, reflection, and music & movement). Once a month, Baby Mykah and her mom will join us for a family visit at our centre. Along with the Seeds of Empathy family guide (Chris Shopland) and literacy coaches, the children will watch the Baby's growth and development, and predict what Baby will be able to do and how Baby might respond. The students will be learning about the amazing development that occurs in the first year of life, as well as the very special attachment relationship between baby and her parents. This program is for children age 3-5. Our center is the first in Saskatchewan to be trained and to offer this world renowned program to our children.

Gathering of Inspirational Prairie Women

Saturday, November 2, 2019

NUTRIEN COMMUNITY HALL – ROCANVILLE, SK

Gather is an event for like-minded women who live on the prairies.
It is a day of inspirational women, networking and self care.

GUEST SPEAKERS:

SLEEP WELL CONSULTING
Amanda Huyde
and Jana Danielson:
On Being Women -
Finding Your Superpowers

This interactive workshop will feature pragmatic strategies to your health and wellness, and ultimately to find your superpowers. They will touch on nutrition, hydration, sleep, movement, and how all of this plays into the mental/spiritual wellness necessary to keep us going as moms, daughters, wives, and partners every day.

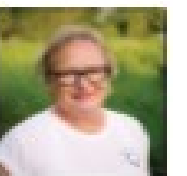

Christa Lee Froese:
Journey to Joy

Christa Lee Froese is a journalist and author by the strictest definition. But the true description of her goes more like this: Mother. Writer. Creator. Sufferer. Seeker. After a nervous breakdown eight years ago, Froese was left to reconstruct life as she had created it. She took on a homemade joy project that saved her life and turned into the bones for her first book ... Journey to Joy. The humour-based memoir brings to life this prairie woman's recovery from depression & anxiety, following Froese on her two-year joy project to restore her well-being.
