SUN MON TUE WED THU FRI SAT

After all of this fundraising the Rocanville Playground Committee has finally ordered the new play structure! Thank you to all of the volunteers & donators who have made phase one possible! BUT we are not done yet... our next step is to install the new play structure! Installation will take place from September 28th to 30th & we are requesting your help! We require a minimum of 10 volunteers per day to get this job done. Please contact Kim at kimgulka@sasktel.net or call Rocanville School at 306-645-2838.

It has been a wonderful summer season at Rocanville Aquatic Centre and it is not over yet!

Unfortunately it is over for me. Taking on the position of manager this year posed its challenges and triumphs making for an busy and eventful summer. I have truly enjoyed being able to come back to my community and help keep you safe in the water, as well as active, and of course to teach your young ones to swim. Thank you to every on the pool board, as well to those at the Recreation Office and Town Office for being so lovely to work with and to all those who have made my time here enjoyable! As well a huge thank you to all my staff who have been incredible to work with. And to Sue Sadler for guiding me through this learning experience and for her dedication as Pool Director. Till next year.

Just keep swimming,

Paige Hutchinson

Five Financial Planning Strategies for Expectant Parents.

If you're planning to start a family or are celebrating a new pregnancy, there are strategies you can use to strengthen your financial position after your child arrives.

1. Practice living on a reduced income

Living on less income can be difficult enough without throwing in the extra expenses a child can bring. Calculate what you can expect to get from government programs and employer top-ups, and try living on that amount while you're still working. Stash what's left over in a dedicated fund for the costs associated with raising a child, or put it towards repaying debt.

2 Keep your retirement plans on track

Your employer may allow you to keep contributing to your workplace retirement plan throughout your leave, especially if your employer provides a matching contribution; try to continue to make those contributions even if you have to reduce the amount. If you usually contribute to a personal Registered Retirement Savings Plan (RRSP), consider contributing to the Tax-Free Savings Account (TFSA) instead while your income is lower and the tax deduction for RRSP contributions isn't as valuable. However you prefer to save for the future, it's important to keep up the momentum.

3 Maintain your health and dental coverage

You may be able to maintain your existing health and dental benefits while you're on leave-get the details from your human resources department. If you can't, or if you don't have benefits, consider private health and dental insurance to protect yourself and your family. Should one of you need dental work, prescription drugs or physiotherapy, it's comforting to know you're covered.

4 Protect your family with insurance and an up-to date will

A defendant is just that-someone who depends on you. But what if you're not able to care for your child? Consider life, disability and critical illness insurance to help protect your family's lifestyle and update your will to include a guardian and trustee.

5. Start thinking about post-secondary education

It's never too early to start thinking about post-secondary education costs. As soon as you have your child's social insurance number, you can open a Registered Education Savings Plan (RESP) that established a dedicated funding pool for your child's education. The government matches 20% of your contributions, up to a maximum of $500 per year and up to a lifetime maximum of $7200 per child. A child is eligible until the end of the year he or she turns 17 (some conditions apply for children age 15 and older).

When should I apply for Benefits?

Apply as soon as possible after you stop working. For Employment insurance (EI) benefits, apply online www.esdc.gc.ca/en/ei/apply.page or in person at a Service Canada Office. Note that there is a one-week waiting period between stopping work and starting to receive EI benefits.

What Government Documents do I need for my child?

As soon as possible after the birth, apply for:

Birth certificate-apply to your province or territory

Health card-apply to your province or territory

Social Insurance number-apply at www.canada.ca/en/employment-social-development/programs/sin/newborns.html

Also apply for child and family benefits including the Canada Child Benefit. Your province may offer a unified application for all these documents and programs. Find more information at www.cra-arc.gc.ca/bnfts/menu-eng.html.
